STATE TROOPERS OF THREE STATES GUARDING TRUCKS

Philadelphia Firm Appeals To Police After Drivers
Are Threatened

REFUSE TO JOIN UNION

Trucks Are Now Being Convoyed by Officers, it is Reported

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—(INS)—State troopers of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania today were guarding trucking operations of a large Philadelphia company whose drivers have been threatened with violence unless they join a "racket union."

D. Morton Atkinson, head of the trucking concern, told police he feared the "protection racketeers" would carry out their threats. State police have been assigned to convoy the trucks.

Early in the evening D. Morton Atkinson, head of the company, went to Manayunk police and told them an unidentified man had driven up to the trucking station at 231 Ripka avenue and threatened the drivers when his efforts to unionize them were unsuccessful. Requests for protection were soon broadcast to State highway patrolmen.

When the first truck left for Carlisle, Mr. Atkinson and a companion trailed it in an automobile until State police picked it up on the Lincoln Highway outside the city limits.

A second truck, bound for New York, was convoyed by Manayunk police in a bandit chaser as far as the Tacony-Palmyra bridge, where it was met by New Jersey troopers.

County Peach Yield Much Below Normal

Bucks county's peach crop, according to dealers of fruits and vegetables this year is far below normal. This was learned today as various stores were visited and when it was stated that the peach season is rapidly nearing its end.

According to a representative of one Doylestown firm, it was a storm early last Spring which spelled disaster to this year's peach crop. The fruit was about set when the storm came along and did its damage.

A representative of a large orchard in the Buckingham section reported that this orchard this year has yielded no apples, peaches, plums and quinces. Other orchards, it was learned, had suffered the same fate. One orchardist reported that the frost early in the Spring was responsible for his shortage of peaches this Fall.

Orchards in the Solebury section, however, it has been learned, have been yielding quite well and as a result a number of orchardists have been dependent upon the Solebury orchards for their supply this Summer.

VOLSTEAD'S HOME STATE IN REPEAL PROCESSION

Vote 2 to 1 for the Wiping
Out of National Prohibition

CITIES SWING THE VOTE

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 13.—(INS)—An avalanche of wet ballots in the cities placed Minnesota, home state of Andrew J. Volstead, in the repeal procession today with a vote of better than 2 to 1 in favor of wiping out national prohibition.

Returns from 1,693 of the state's 3,693 precincts gave 273,350 votes for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and 126,550 against.

Many rural areas, where prohibitionists polled the greatest vote, were yet to be heard from. Repealists conceded that the rural vote might reduce the wet majority to some extent, but were confident that a margin of more than 2 to 1 would be maintained.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 13.—(INS)—A repeal victory of nearly 3 to 1 margin was being tabulated today from the returns in Colorado's referendum on repeal of national prohibition.

Almost complete returns from 1,061 precincts of the state's 1,547 gave: 112,525 for repeal; 49,590 against.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 13.—(INS)—Maryland today joined the parade of 29 states which have voted on ratification of the Federal Amendment repealing prohibition and denounced prohibition.

It was estimated that Baltimore voted almost 11 to 1 for repeal.

When Albert C. Ritchie, this state's three time, consecutively, governor, cast his ballot, he said:

"I have been waiting 12 years to cast my ballot against prohibition and it with a deep sense of satisfaction I at last take advantage of the opportunity for which I have been waiting and working so long."

TO TAKE WITNESS STAND

Philadelphia, Sept. 13.—H. D. Allebach, president of the Interstate Milk Producers Association will take the witness stand at the Federal re-hearing on the protested Philadelphia Milkshed Marketing agreement, it was announced today in a surprise statement by counsel for the organization.

Allebach had previously refused three formal requests by farmers organizations that he testify. The interstate and its officers have been the target of attacks by dissatisfied farmers who claim the organization no longer represents them.

The principal development at the second day of the hearing was Attorney Fox's demand that the books of the district's five largest dairy companies be examined. Coupled with this demand was another that a firm of certified public accountants replace Dr. Charles Reitel, of Pittsburgh, already appointed by Dr. Clyde L. King, Federal milk administrator, to begin the audit for the Department of Agriculture.

Attorney Roland S. Morris, counsel for the Philadelphia Milk Exchange of which the largest distributors are members, expressed the willingness of the organization to submit to a probe by the Secretary of Agriculture, but refused to allow the books of members to be opened for inspection by Commonwealth officials or attorneys for the farmers.

RESCUE SQUAD, CROYDON, HAS ANOTHER AMBULANCE

To Replace One Which Was Damaged; Is Fully Equipped

MADE SEVERAL RESCUES

CROYDON, Sept. 12.—Bucks County Rescue Squad has finished its first Summer of work along the beaches near here after rescuing many persons from the water. The guards patrolling the beaches were young men, unemployed residents, who offered their services, and parents placed great confidence in the workers, their minds free from worry as their children played on the beaches.

The Squad has purchased another ambulance to replace the one that has been in use for the past few weeks. The latest addition to the squad's equipment is said to be nearly new. The body of the ambulance is finished in a color scheme of cream and black. The machine is equipped with many of the latest appliances, including hot and cold running water, electric fan, hot-air heat, removable convertible-type bed.

To secure an ambulance of this type it was necessary for the members of the squad to drain their treasury and obligate themselves to an unpaid balance, according to officers. "As we are members of a philanthropic organization with the members voluntarily serving you, the people of Bucks County, we would appreciate any contributions whatever to help us continue this service to society," stated members today. Anyone desiring to assist is asked to address communications to the Squad at Croydon, Pa.

Officers today issued telephone numbers of members who may be called in case ambulance service is desired: J. E. Harris, secretary, phone Bristol 7427; Thomas Roberts, president, phone Bristol 7541.

The decision to purchase the new ambulance was reached after members took into consideration the cost of repairing the old ambulance which was recently involved in an accident. The squad was informed the woman driver of the second machine involved had no funds or security on which the squad could seek legal redress for damages. The new machine is of a type called an S and S, with a six-cylinder Continental motor.

LAD, SEVEN YEARS, INFORMS JURY HOW CHUM MET DEATH

Little Leonard Simons Gives Version in Straight-
Forward Manner

IN GRACE WEST CASE

Driver of the Bus, E. J. Beck, is Exonerated of
All Blame

A little light-haired boy of seven walked up to Dr. John J. Sweeney, coroner of Bucks County, in the municipal building here yesterday afternoon, and placing his chubby hand upon the Bible told his version of how Grace West, nine, met her death beneath the wheels of a bus of the Delaware River Coach Company, on September 5th.

The little fellow, Leonard Simons, told in a straight-forward manner, but in childish language what he saw happen on that night. Coroner Sweeney took great caution not to exercise the juvenile witness, and succeeded in getting from Leonard a fair account of the tragedy. Leonard told the coroner and the jury that he and "Shindy" (Louis Flatch), and Grace were playing on Otter street. He then described as best he could the manner in which his little play-mate had run out into the street and the wheels of the heavy bus had passed over her.

The jury, after hearing the testimony of all the witnesses, exonerated Eugene J. Beck, driver of the bus, of any negligence in the operation of the vehicle, and he was released from the custody of the authorities.

The jury was comprised of John Smoyer, Bert Hughes, Gustave Williams, Harry VanHorn, James Guy and Thomas Lawrence.

The witnesses were: Hilda Taylor, Helen Collins, Mary Terneson, William Simons, Walter Hellings, Chris Magrain, Dominick Braschia, Joseph Flatch, Frank Phillips, deputy coroner W. Furman Young, and Eugene Beck, the driver.

Miss Taylor and Mrs. Collins were passengers upon the bus. They testified that the driver was not proceeding at any great speed, but neither of them actually saw the child struck, because of the seats they occupied in the bus. Mrs. Terneson saw the body of the child lying on the road-way after the accident, and described its position. William Simons heard the screeching of the brakes, and also told of the position of the body after the accident. Louis Flatch ("Shindy"), was not as brave as his chum, Leonard. "Shindy" buried his head in his mother's dress, and Coroner Sweeney excused him from testifying. Walter Hellings said he was about a square away from the accident, but attracted by the noise saw the child's body roll over and over. Chris Magrain told the jury he was standing in front of his home at the time, and the first that he saw the child was when she was directly in front of the bus. Dominick Braschia was about 30 feet away from the scene of the accident when it happened. He heard glass break and turning quickly saw the back wheel of the bus pass over the child. Joseph Flatch saw one of the rear wheels run over the body.

Frank Phillips gave a graphic account as an eye witness, saying that he saw the child struck by the front of the bus, and the body came off of the right side, rolling around in front of the back wheel. All witnesses testified that the driver was proceeding up Otter street at a moderate rate of speed, with both left wheels in between the trolley rails. Eugene Beck, the driver, told the jury he had been driving an automobile for nine years, and operating a bus for three weeks. His route at the time of the accident was from Forresdale to Tullytown, a distance of about nine miles. The schedule called for covering this distance in three-quarters of an hour which was ample time. He estimated his speed at the time of the accident as about 15 miles per hour. He said the child first appeared in view about ten feet in front of him. "I immediately put on my brakes," said Beck. When questioned if he had sounded his horn he said he had not, but that he had applied the brakes at once.

Candy Vending Machine Robbed at Grand Theatre

The candy vending machine in the lobby of the Grand Theatre was broken into and robbed sometime during the night or early morning.

When employees opened the theatre this morning they found the back of the machine on the floor and a box of candy also on the floor. The back had been ripped off and some candy taken. It is believed boys entered the theatre, after the show, through a coal window in the basement. They apparently left the theatre through a side door.

WILD LIFE INCREASING

Uncle Sam's latest big game "census" is out. While the accuracy of the figures is not guaranteed, the experience of forest rangers and others in estimating the number of animals in particular areas makes the report far more than the result of mere guess-work.

The total number of big game animals in the 148 national forests is placed at 1,163,141, which represents an approximate increase of 40 per cent since 1926. This increase was not a steady one, as the latest total was slightly lower than the 1931 figures.

While most of the big game continue to be found in the national forests, wild life is being gradually increased in certain states under protection and planned management, it is disclosed. This is a reflection of growing interest in the subject being shown by individual states.

It is interesting to note that grizzly bears in national forests showed a gratifying increase in the latest census, their number being placed at 5,164 as against 3,747 for the preceding year. In Alaska, however, the total dropped from 747 to 664. The total of black and brown bears is 52,331, an increase from 50,596.

Although elk were reported increasing in the national forests of the West, only about 60 remained in the forests of the East. Especially gratifying to hunters will be the large increase reported among deer.

The preservation of America's wild life very properly is claiming important attention from the Federal Government. The duty, however, is one which should not be confined to the national government. States, likewise, should interest themselves in the matter. Many are doing this. It's a worthwhile work.

IT NEVER CHANGES

Rural America is now in the midst of another county fair season, exhibiting, comparing and judging the products of the soil and the handiwork of the farm home in friendly though spirited competition and for the mutual benefit of all.

In hundreds of thousands of exhibits the true spirit of America shines forth in a steady light—the calm confidence of men and women in their ability to wrest a living from the soil; the pride in homely achievements; the neighborly helpfulness and good-natured rivalry for first prizes; the renewing of old acquaintances; the assertion of an optimism and courage which no depression can destroy; and the healthful co-mingling of city people and rural folk.

Not in a hundred years does the county fair change. Grandchild sees it as grandfather did in his youth, with its pens of prize livestock, tables of canned goods, needlework and blue-ribbon fruit, vegetables and grain, trotting races on the track, interscholastic contests, the noisy midway and a thousand other attractions and diversions. It is always the same yet the country never tires of it. In that respect it is like the circus.

America owes much to the county fair—so does agriculture. More wonderful to gaze upon is a world's fair such as the Century of Progress but greater are the contributions of the county fair to the progress of rural America.

—All the bad luck in the world to that racing man in Cleveland who is giving out interviews that he is an ex-husband of Marie Dressler's.

Nearly every star in the business has been victimized by such phonies, but it's a shame to hear Marie, who needs every ounce of her strength to complete "The Late Christopher Bean."

How swell she was about it too!

A suspicious editor of a Cleveland newspaper telegraphed:

"Racing man here (giving name) says in interview that he was married to you at Weatherford, Texas, and divorced six years later."

With that forgiving nature and saving sense of humor of hers, Marie wired back:

"Statement untrue in every respect, but I am very tired and need a long rest, so if his horses are running well and he has two million dollars or so I might consider his proposition at this time."

One of the better known lyric writers recently was assigned to a picture very similar to Warner Brothers' "Forty Second Street."

As Marnie Seiff tells it, the producer came to the writer and suggested: "Why don't you do us a song like 'The Shadow Waltz'?"

Whereupon, in a squeal elegant, the writer came back:

"Listen, you're writing 'Forty-Second Street,' not 'The Goldiggers'; stick to it."

Here's a hot one. The eastern antics of Huey Long are keeping Warner Brothers writers at top speed adding sequences to "The King Fish." On the day after it happened, that fisticuff episode was in the script. Now, the loud Louisanan's plan to rent Madison Square Garden has joined it.

Marie Dressler

Newlyweds Dorothy Lee and Marshall Duffield don't believe in separate bank accounts. They'll put their weekly checks—hers as an actress and his as an assistant director—into a common fund. Another odd angle for a Hollywood marriage. Marsh must leave Dorothy at home three nights a week. He goes to law school.

QUICK GLIMPSES:

What on earth was the idea of novelist J. P. McEvoy secretly flying out here under the name of John Phillips? He was spotted, anyway, on his first day at the Paramount lot. . . . That loud buzzing of talk at the Colony Club was caused by the appearance of the Countess Di Frasso with William Powell. . . . What with Carole Lombard going places with Gary Cooper, the gossip got quite a thrill. . . . Stay on the Mae West set and sooner or later you'll see the whole cinema world. Harold Lloyd was the latest to succumb to curiosity.

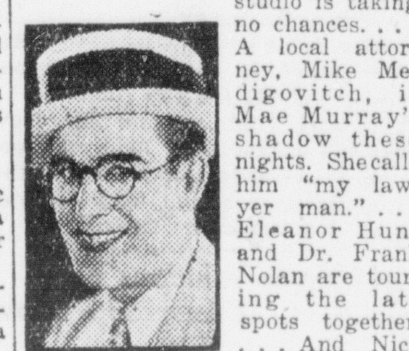

A trained nurse—accompanies Claudette Colbert to Honolulu. The studio is taking no chances. . . . A local attorney, Mike Medigovich, is Mae Murray's shadow these nights. She calls him "my lawyer man." . . . Eleanor Hunt and Dr. Frank Nolan are touring the late spots together. . . . And Nick Stuart has been taking Helen Godwin to the Miramar.

That baby party Helen Twelvetrees is giving for Jack Woody, Jr., will be a gala occasion for the photogs. Children of many celebrities will be there.

DID YOU KNOW—

That Cecil B. DeMille always carries a pocketful of gold coins, dated 1881, the year of his birth?

SYNOPSIS

Born of humble parents, Mom and Pop, in a tiny Middle West factory town, Tommy Randolph, "always different from other children," becomes a high school football sensation both to the delight and disdain of his hard-working family. Big universities are bidding for him with the chances favoring Thorndyke, a "millionaire's college" in the East. His father, veteran glassworker and staunch Democrat, is pondering Tommy's athletic-scholastic future. . . .

CHAPTER SEVEN

Pop made up his mind slowly about Thorndyke. He pretended to be weighing it pro and con.

"I don't know whether I want you among all them capitalists' sons," Pop declared.

Tommy laughed.

"Besides," Pop continued, "I ain't gonna have you mixed up with them crooks in Wall Street—the first thing you know you'll be like the rest of them, trying to get all the money in your hands."

"You said it, Pop," Tommy laughed, slapping Pop on the back. "In the meantime, Mom, how about a buck—got to take Dot to the movies tonight."

The scamp knew Mom liked him to go around with Dorothy Whitney and that he could get money from her easier that way. Sometimes she knew he wasn't going with Dorothy at all because Mom passed him in front of the poolroom with the boys. Mom didn't like the poolroom but still'n all she guessed it wasn't really bad. Boys were full of life and they had to put their time in where there was life.

After Tommy went out Pop sat on the front steps a long time like he was studying it out.

"Why don't you mention it to Charlie Whitney?" Mom asked.

Pop snorted. "I can run my own house."

Then he pretended to be thinking it out again but the first thing Mom knew his head was nodding and he was asleep. Pop was as tickled as she was but he just wouldn't show it. She knew him.

But just the same Mom was a little bit worried about it. Thorndyke was way off some place and if Tommy didn't have as good clothes as the rest and all that maybe it wouldn't be so nice.

So the next time Mom saw Charlie Whitney down street she asked him what he thought. Charlie looked at her rather oddly but he was very nice about it and asked her in for an ice cream. A funny little glow went over Mom as she sat there with Charlie Whitney; he was getting heavy now and had glasses and his hair was thinning but Mom couldn't help remembering when she used to see Charlie in Davis's like this with his crowd when he was running around town before he was married.

"Elizabeth," he said, "I'm glad you asked me." Charlie's voice was smooth and low and nice to listen to. It helped make people like him and trust him because they didn't feel Charlie wanted anything they had; and of course Mom had practically been raised with him.

"You see, Elizabeth, Thorndyke is pretty far from home and Tom will meet a different sort of people."

"You mean the millionaires?" Mom asked, hesitating, because Charlie was a millionaire, too, or close to it.

"In a way," Charlie answered, looking in his glass; "but it isn't just money. Some people make a great point out of the fact that their fathers and grandfathers

"Don't let Tommy forget," said Mr. Whitney, the Town Tycoon, to Mom, "that this football glory will last only a few years."

were important. Of course that doesn't mean much to us back here but they think it's something big."

Big-heads, Mom thought. Charlie's own mother was one; but Mom wouldn't say that for the world; she just nodded.

Charlie went on: "Now if he went to a school nearer home like State or Illinois, or Notre Dame or Northwestern, he'd be more with his own kind of people; he'd understand them and they'd understand him." Charlie looked at her then. Mom nodded—she knew what he was driving at even if he was trying to spare her feelings; but she was afraid Tommy wouldn't.

"He's so wrapped up on going to Thorndyke," Mom said, "I'm afraid we couldn't stop him. And Tommy's got lots of nerve."

Charlie snorted a little. "Yes—Tommy's a hard boy to stop, all right. I wouldn't say he had an inferiority complex."

"But he'd be improving himself, wouldn't he?" Mom asked. She was puzzled; if it was anybody else but Charlie Whitney she'd think he didn't want Tommy to get his chance but wanted him to stay poor.

Charlie nodded. "I suppose—but don't let him forget, Elizabeth, that this football glory will last only a few years. He musn't forget that the important thing is to study hard and take advantage of his chances so that, when football is over, he'll know something."

Mom did not mention to Pop what Charlie had said; if she said a word about big heads Pop would be sure to start on the capitalists and high hats and what right did any of them have to look down on his son because if it wasn't for the workingmen where would the country be; and he might work himself up into a rage about it and try to stop Tommy from going and that would only start real trouble.

Tommy was going to Thorndyke anyhow and down in her heart Mom knew she wanted him to go. Nobody was too good for her Tommy and she had confidence he would show all of them. He was

RECLASSIFY EMPLOYEES

Harrisburg, Sept. 13—Governor Gifford Pinchot's reclassification of state employees on the basis of "equal pay for equal work" today showed the salaries of some officials were slashed as much as $2900 while increases ranged up to $900. The work of the Governor's special committee will be reflected in the employees' pay checks Friday.

30,000 STRIKE IN CUBA

Havana, Sept. 13—A strike of 30,000 throughout Cuba and unconfirmable, vague reports of soldier disorders in Matanzas Province, disturbed the serenity of the Republic today as President Roman Gran San Martin placed his government bureau on an orderly working basis.

ONE-QUARTER OUT OF DEPRESSION

New York City, Sept. 13—Under the vigorous leadership of President Roosevelt, the country today has been listed "one quarter of the way" out of the depression since last March, and the "fight has just begun," Brigadier General Hugh S. Johnson, National Recovery Administrator, told an audience at Madison Square Garden. Addressing 10,000 persons gathered under the auspices of the Foreign Language section of the city's N. R. A. committee, the leader of the President's war on depression last night lashed out at those opposing the Recovery program, appealing for continued confidence and co-operation, declaring "industry is to be freed."

"I know you will all be heartened to know the standing of the Recovery Organization is mighty," Johnson said. "I have just come from Washington, where our last word was that 85 per cent of all employers of the nation have enrolled under the N. R. A." Johnson told his audience. "There are signs of a trade advancement everywhere," and that "every economic index has moved substantially upward since last March."

The N. R. A. leader's address, the first he has made here since he took office, was a "curtain raiser" for the city's monster N. R. A. demonstration today culminating in a parade of more than 250,000 marchers up Fifth Avenue in the greatest procession in the city's history. Stores, banks and offices and the principal exchanges all declared a half holiday to permit their employees to participate.

"Miss America" Queen of Beauty

Champ in Embryo

Experts predict a brilliant future in the tennis world for Miss Virginia Arnold, of Dorchester, Mass., who is shown in an excellent action picture during the recent tourney at her home town. Miss Arnold's form is reminiscent of the great Suzanne Lenglen at her best.

Wearing her crown and royal robes, "Miss America" graciously poses for the camera after she had been chosen as the fairest of the fair at the Atlantic City, N. J., beauty pageant. In private life she is Miss Marion Bergeron, of West Haven, Conn. She is 16, a platinum blonde, does not smoke or drink and her father is a policeman.

Perry is the first Englishman to win the coveted trophy since 1903.
